The usual friends attended the weekly Smoking Club night where, of course, wee drappings were indulged in up to late hours. It was early in the night when a member got up, as if to go home, and a friend said to him, "Yer not quitting so soon, Sandy?"

"No, no," said Sandy, "I'm just bidding ya a good night while I recognize ya!"

In 1938—after the repeal of Prohibition—the Tam O'Shanter was asked by its guests to make space for drinking wine and cocktails. In the late '30s you could buy a glass of wine for fifty cents and a pint of California's favorite beer back then, Lucky Lager, for fifteen cents. Times may have changed prices, but they can't change the good times we have with friends.

Guid health!
